Index

Volume 7, 1983–1984

Archambault, F. Measurement and evaluation concerns in evaluating programs for the gifted and talented, Number 1, p. 12.

Aylesworth, M. Guidelines for selecting instruments in evaluating programs for the gifted, Number 1, p. 38.

Ballard, B. J. Role of the Council for Exceptional Children in federal advocacy for the gifted, Number 4, p. 238.

Barnette, J. Naturalistic approaches to gifted and talented program evaluation, Number 1, p. 26.

Benson, C. Book Review: Books for the Gifted Child, by Barbara Baskin & Karen Harris, Number 2, p. 146.

Buescher, T. Interviews: Thinking through the evaluation process: An interview with Joseph Renzulli, Number 1, p. 3; What do the national calls for reform mean for the gifted and talented?: An interview with James Gallagher, Number 4, p. 229.

Callahan, C. & Caldwell, M. Using evaluation results to improve programs for the gifted and talented, Number 1, p. 60.

Chapey, G. & Trimarco, T. Participation of parents in programs for the gifted in New York City, Number 3, p. 178.

Coffey, K. Do you really believe in gifted and talented education? Be an advocate, Number 4, p. 278.

Cohn, S. Project F.U.T.U.R.E.: A progress report after three prototype years of serving intellectually gifted children, Number 2, p. 103.

Corn, A. & Bishop, V. Educating teachers of the gifted-handicapped: A survey of teacher education programs, Number 2, p. 137.

Crabbe, A. Reaching out, Number 2, p. 130.

Crammond, B. & Martin, C. Relationships of the SOILAT screening form to arithmetic and reading achievement, Number 2, p. 98.

Davis, B. Book Review: Guiding the gifted child, by James Webb, Number 3, p. 218.

Index

Volume 7, 1983–1984

Archambault, F. Measurement and evaluation concerns in evaluating programs for the gifted and talented, Number 1, p. 12.

Aylesworth, M. Guidelines for selecting instruments in evaluating programs for the gifted, Number 1, p. 38.

Ballard, B. J. Role of the Council for Exceptional Children in federal advocacy for the gifted, Number 4, p. 238.

Barnette, J. Naturalistic approaches to gifted and talented program evaluation, Number 1, p. 26.

Benson, C. Book Review: Books for the Gifted Child, by Barbara Baskin & Karen Harris, Number 2, p. 146.

Buescher, T. Interviews: Thinking through the evaluation process: An interview with Joseph Renzulli, Number 1, p. 3; What do the national calls for reform mean for the gifted and talented?: An interview with James Gallagher, Number 4, p. 229.

Callahan, C. & Caldwell, M. Using evaluation results to improve programs for the gifted and talented, Number 1, p. 60.

Chapey, G. & Trimarco, T. Participation of parents in programs for the gifted in New York City, Number 3, p. 178.

Coffey, K. Do you really believe in gifted and talented education? Be an advocate, Number 4, p. 278.

Cohn, S. Project F.U.T.U.R.E.: A progress report after three prototype years of serving intellectually gifted children, Number 2, p. 103.

Corn, A. & Bishop, V. Educating teachers of the gifted-handicapped: A survey of teacher education programs, Number 2, p. 137.

Crabbe, A. Reaching out, Number 2, p. 130.

Crammond, B. & Martin, C. Relationships of the SOILAT screening form to arithmetic and reading achievement, Number 2, p. 98.

Davis, B. Book Review: Guiding the gifted child, by James Webb, Number 3, p. 218.

Deiulio, J. Attitudes of school counselors and psychologists toward gifted children, Number 3, p. 164.

Delisle, J. Quasi-experiments in gifted education: A confounding problem, Number 3, p. 151.

Fichter, G. Ohio's network: The heart of it all, Number 4, p. 291.

Gogel, E. Gifted and talented advocacy bibliography, Number 4, p. 297.

Hanninen, G. Effectiveness of a preschool program for the gifted and talented, Number 3, p. 192.

Jones, M. Advocacy: Making a difference for the gifted, Number 4, p. 270.

Karnes, F. & Lee, L. Cognitive abilities of gifted students as measured by the Developing Cognitive Abilities Test, Number 3, p. 170.

Kitano, M. & Tafoya, N. Preschool children's perceptions of leadership and how it works, Number 2, p. 77.

Miller, M. Book Review: A system of marker variables for the field of learning disabilities, by Barbara Keogh, Susan Major-Kingsley, Hisako Omori-Gordon, & Helen Reid, Number 2, p. 146.

Mitchell, P. Mapping a state advocacy plan for the gifted, Number 4, p. 252.

Monson, J. An advocates' guide to advocating . . . or a good offense without being offensive, Number 4, p. 244.

Parker, J. & Karnes, F. Graduate degree programs in the education of the gifted, Number 3, p. 205.

Reis, S. Avoiding the testing trap: Using alternative assessment instruments to evaluate programs for the gifted, Number 1, p. 45.

Robinson, A. & Feldhusen, J. Don't leave them alone: Effects of probing on gifted children's imaginative explanations, Number 3, p. 156.

Wallis, L. Selective early school entrance: Predicting school success, Number 2, p. 89.

Wasson, F. Advocacy for the gifted and talented in Florida: Why it works, Number 4, p. 286.

Whitmore, J. TAG'S central mission: Advocacy, Number 4, p. 227.

Wolf, J. & Stephens, T. Training models for parents of the gifted, Number 2, p. 120.